What You Need to Know

- The U.S. Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation consolidated the FTX cases in a federal district court in Miami.
- The panel agreed to exclude the lawsuits against Signature Bank and Silvergate Bank.
- U.S. District Judge K. Michael Moore will preside over all of the cases.

On Monday, the U.S. Judicial Panel on Multidistrict Litigation ordered that dozens of FTX cases be transferred to U.S. District Judge K. Michael Moore, who sits in the Southern District of Florida.

And attorneys, such as Adam Moskowitz, the managing partner at the Moskowitz Law Firm, who argued in favor of sending the cases to Florida, and Stuart Davidson, of Robbins, Geller, Rudman & Dowd in Boca Raton, Florida, who has a case in California, expressed admiration for Moore, who “will certainly continue to efficiently and effectively coordinate all of these important actions here in Miami.”
